Selected Poetry.

In Heaven is Rest.
Beyond the cares, the joys of life,
Beyond the fleeting joys of life,
In Heaven is rest.
Beyond our fears, a galling chain,
Our earthly hopes, so false and vain;
Beyond that now we would conceal
From friends and foes, the wrongs we feel,
In Heaven is rest.
The angel band, the happy throng,
Around the throne, with harp and song,
Are there at rest.
There wearied ones, the conflict o'er,
A rest enjoy unknown before;
And there shall we, our sorrows done,
Our battle fought, our victory won,
Forever rest.

Humorous.

SCOTCH HUMOR.—What the Ettrick shepherd said of his dog Hector is now going the rounds: It is a gude sign of a dowie, sir," says Hogg, "when his face grows like his master's. Hector got so like me, afore he died, that I remember, when I was owre lazy to gang till the kirk, I used to send him to tak my place in the pew, and the minister never kent the difference. Indeed, he once asked me neist day what I thought of the sermon; for he saw me wonderful attentive among a rather sleepy congregation. Hector and me gied anither sic a look, that was feared Mr. Paton wud hae observed it; but he was a simple, primitive, unspectin' auld man—a very Nathaniel without guile, and jealousied naething; though baith Hector and me was like to split, and the dowie, after lauchin' in his sleeve for mair nor a hundred yards, could staunt nae langer, but was obliged to loop awa ower a hedge into a potato field, pretending he scentid game."

"FLIPPITY-FLIPPITY."—A country girl once went to the city to pay a visit to one of her old and best friends; this friend was married to a rich city merchant, and was a leader of fashion. In city etiquette, of course, the visitor was verdant, and made numerous mistakes. Her friend wished to initiate her fully into the "mysteries," and as they were going to a large ball, gave her the following instructions, viz: "Eat only one small cake and one saucer of ice-cream; and when your attendant presses you to take more, answer that you have masticated a sufficiency, and more would be a superfluity." Things went on smoothly until her attendant asked her to partake of more refreshments, when, to the horror of her friend and amusement of the company, she answered, in a loud voice, "I have evaporated in sufficiently; any more would go flippity-flippity."

THE ARK.—The sermon on the "Harp of a thousand strings," reminds a Georgia correspondent of an incident that occurred in his neighborhood, where two Hard-Shell Baptist preachers, on one occasion, happened to be in the same pulpit together. While one was preaching to say, "When Abraham built the ark—" The one behind him strove to correct his blunder by saying out aloud, "Abraham wasn't thar."

But the speaker pushed on, heedless of the interruption, and took occasion shortly to repeat, still more decidedly, "I say, when Abraham built the ark—" "And I say," cried the other, "Abraham wasn't thar."

The Hard-Shell was too hard to be beaten down in his way, and addressing the people, exclaimed, with great indignation, "I say, Abraham was thar, or thara-bouts!"

"JAKE," said a blooming young lady at Versailles, Ind., to her lover, one Sunday evening, "if you mean business by coming here twice a week, I want to know it, and if you mean fun, I'd like to know it, for I've just had an offer from another fellow, and shall take him up in two days if you don't pop." Jake "popped" instantly, and the wedding day was set.

A country fellow went court-ing his girl, and wishing to be conversational, observed:

"The themonkron is twenty degrees below zelen this evening."

"Yes," innocently replied the maiden, "such kinds of birds do fly higher some seasons of the year than others."

A young lady in Boone county, Mo., had a little difficulty with her mother, and smashed the old lady's skull in with a brick. The girl's young man, to whom she was about to be married, has gone West to fight the Indians, so as to have a quiet life.

Four George Washingtons, six Andrew Jacksons, five Henry Clays and two James K. Polks reside in the Louisiana Penitentiary.

Boxing Ears.—A Physiological journal condemns the practice of boxing children's ears. We had supposed, in this advanced age of civilization, that such barbarous punishments were only remembered as relics of the darker ages. But it appears that the practice is sufficiently common in some sections of the country to call forth a decided remonstrance. Besides being a brutal method of punishment, it is dangerous. The passage of the ear is closed by a thin membrane, especially adapted to be influenced by every impulse of the air, and with nothing but the air to support it internally. If any one designed to break or overstretch the membrane he could scarcely devise a more effective means than to bring the hand suddenly and forcibly down upon the passage of the ear, thus driving the air violently before it, with no possibility for its escape but by the membrane giving way. Many children are made deaf in this way.

SOAP SUDS FOR GRAPES.—A. J. Downing, says: "I have seen the Isabella grape produce three thousand fine clusters of well-ripened fruit in a season by the liberal use of manure and soap suds from the weekly wash." The effect of soap suds on other plants is something surprising. A cypress vine, which had remained stationary a fortnight, when about two inches high, immediately began growing after a good watering with soap suds, and grew six inches the first five days.

A man at Columbus was told by his physician that he was in danger of a suffusion of the cerebellum. The patient said if he got that he might as well die at once, so he called for a drink of Cincinnati whisky. There was no help for him then.

The shanks of the teeth are elastic, and exert a uniform distension in the sockets. The stability of the plate is in no way affected by inserting new sets of teeth. Each tooth, independently, may be adjusted to the cutting line.
No rivets, keys, or other objectionable appliances, are employed in connection with the teeth, which are as simple in construction, and as easily used, as a nut for a bolt.
